European Approaches to Inter-Generational Lifelong Learning

www.eagle-project.eu

"Intergenerational means 'being or occurring between two generations' and intergenerational learning refers to the sharing of information, thoughts, feelings and experiences between two generations that can enrich both."

(ThinkQuest, ORACLE Education Foundation, 2007)

"Intergenerational practice aims to bring people together in purposeful, mutually beneficial activities, which promote greater understanding and respect between generations and may contribute to building more cohesive communities."

(Centre for Intergenerational Practice, Beth Johnson Foundation, 2007)

A project aiming at exploring learning opportunities between generations ...

EAGLE or 'European Approaches to Inter-Generational Lifelong Learning' (EAGLE) builds upon different existing aspects in individual lives and in society at large and in learning across age groups and generations, especially in the light of an increasingly aging population, the substantial demographic changes caused hereby and on the constant need for re-qualification and re-generation within the concept of Lifelong Learning (LLL).

EAGLE concentrates on the field of inter-generational as well as later life learning processes within the frameworks of formal and – of specific importance – non-formal, informal and autonomous learning.

Aims & Objectives

EAGLE wants to generate insight into:

- the potential as well as the limitations of trans-, inter-generational formal and informal learning;
- the policies, concepts, analyses, frameworks, experiences in place and empirical evidence available;
- the models of good practice developed in order to formulate policy and practice recommendations.

The core activities of EAGLE will be:

- to experiment, pilot and validate a set of inter-generational learning approaches;
- to support the exchange of ideas and experiences of learning between the generations;
- to create professional dialogue between researchers, developers, practitioners, age group representatives, policy consultants and policy makers;
- to contribute and to encourage new, innovative and alternative learning pathways of (adult) education;
- to encourage a new inter-generational contract in private and professional lives of European citizens.

EAGLE is a European cooperation project in the field of adult education, co-funded by the European Commission under the SOCRATES GRUNDTVIG programme.
